Gene com	eral ments:	Gleeson Land recognise the need to accommodate development in South East Dorset in a sustainable way as possible and in a way that respects the natural capital of the area. The long standing designation of large parts of the heathland as being of international importance is a factor that all developers and Local Authorities need to take into account when making provision for the future development of the area.
		in the context of the He			study for South East Dorset appears to identify specific direct amework.
		In terms of Gleeson Land's interests, it is our opinion that there is sufficient potential within the land which is under their control that financial contributions which are referred to in the IPS, would not be required. It is proposed that a significant amount of the land under the control of Gleesons will be dedicated to a large area of open space which would divert/intercept pressures on the heathlands within the proposed urban extension. Much of the pressures that might be exerted upon the sensitive heathland environments can be intercepted closer to the proposed development itself. Effectively, Gleeson Land are proposing a mixed-use development which will include a substantial area of open space. A master plan for the area has not yet been prepared but based upon the NPFA standard we would anticipate that on site, Gleeson Land could provide about 12 Hectares (about 30 acres) of open space.

General comments:	The locations will partly depend on the outcome of the modelling work currently being undertaken on behalf of the LPAs. So far, discussion with Natural England indicates that new Greenfield developments should incorporate or enable: a) green corridors to provide recreation within the development. b) Recreational opportunities leading away from the nearest heathland c) Buffer-zone SANGS between the development and the nearest heathland In respect of North West Corfe Mullen, this is illustrated by Diagram C in the Strategic Feasibility Study (attached).
	See Drawing No 20183 Concept C Revised, and Drawing No 20183 Concept D Revised, both forming part of the Wimborne/ColehiliInitial Feasibility Study (attached).

General comments:	The impact on our biodiversity of development coupled with climate change should be considered carefully. Biodiversity should be considered in terms of • variation within species (genetic diversity), • variation between species (species diversity), and • variation amongst groups/assemblages of species (habitat diversity). The response of each of these to climate change will be different. Plant communities, by definition, comprise several different species each of which will react to changing climate in different ways. Natural and semi-natural habitats are continua, merging from one type to another. Barriers such as buildings, roads, agricultural land or commercial non-native tree plantations prevent movement of habitats. The smaller the area of natural/semi-natural habitats available the greater is the restriction on the ability of species to move and form new communities. Wetlands, including small streams and ponds, are at particular risk from warming because of greater evaporation. Higher rates of evapo-transpiration (the uptake of water by plants) will also have a major impact on the availability of water to more shallow rooted species. Amongst other things climate change, including increased ambient C02 levels, is predicted to affect soil mycorrhizae, the synchronisation of predators and prey and of herbivores and plant hosts, genetic diversity, phenology and the impact of invasive species. Those areas that are currently protected contain a small proportion of our biodiversity resource. To withstand the pressures of climate change it is therefore imperative that the biodiversity of habitats outside of these prime areas is considered as part of an integrated land management approach to the development of East Dorset.

General comment	General The draft Regional Spatial Strategy requires under policy ENV4, the consideration, using the South West Nature Map as guidance, of opportunities for biodiversity enhancement. The Nature Map focuses on landscape-scale biodiversity opportunities "creating more functional units which are more resilient to climate change" Allied to this, the draft RSS also requires, under policy Gi, Green Infrastructre (GI) policies, a GI plan and delivery programme. The issues & options document does mention GI under Sport & Leisure, but the definition of GI as "a chain of lonked green routes to provide for informal recreation needs" completely misses the point of the RSS definition of GI as multifunctional, covering areas of, for example, nature reserve, floodplains and historic sites. The overall network will be accessible (though not necessarily each bit of it) and provide resilience in the face of climate change. It is therfore important that GI is included in the Natural Environment rather than the leisure section of the core strategy, and that a strategic

General comments: No, Page 15 of the Core Strategy Issues and Options Report states that "advice from Natural England is that no conventional development metres of Dorset heathland sites". By the word conventional, we assume that Natural England is referring to houses being developed und (use Classes) Amendment (England) Order 2005, rather than Class C1 (hotels) or Class C2 (residential care homes). We consider that guidance on whether Class C1 and C2 land uses can be developed within 400 metres of a protected heathland.	er Class 3 of the Town and Country Planning
