I am opposed to the "Residential Allocations" at Wyke Oliver / Brackendown in Preston. This is at the top of a slope and the areas lower down on the slope have suffered from flooding in the past. If the proposed areas are "paved over" with housing, this renders them unable to soak up the rainfall so the flooding lower down the slope will become worse and might even cause landslides with loss of property and even life itself. With climate change, catastrophic weather events (the like of which we see on TV so frequently now) which would once have been thought unthinkable in the UK, are now very real threats. Would Dorset Council really want to be culpable for creating the conditions to allow such loss of property or life?
