I read with utter dismay the article in The Forum Focus re the neighbourhood plan including additional greenfield sites beyond the bypass for development. When the bypass was built it was stated that it would be the boundary for further development. If the greenfield sites were built on, it would mean a free for all to build anywhere. Greenfield sites should not to be developed, full stop. What is wrong with the planning department. Permission is given for houses to be built that are not in any way or form in keeping with the surrounding area. I understand the need for houses, but there are empty flats above shops and do we need so many industrial sites? These areas could be utilised for housing. Blandford can not sustain any more development as our infrastructure is already on overload.
